Dear Mr. Vaughan:

As a graduating senior from college and past officer in a national organization, I have become involved with people across the United States. These have been people of varying backgrounds and achievements. I have always been proud to say I was from Appomattox when meeting and working with them. I felt like I had been adequately prepared to take my place in the college community. I believe that my school system and the citizens of my county were relatively open-minded and progressive. Reviewing the recent action of the County School Board regarding Coach Bragg's position with the school system, has caused me to look again at this county. I am surprised at the actions taken by the board. I was never on one of Coach Bragg's teams, but nonetheless I too had been influenced by his outstanding character and integrity. Ours is a competitive world and there is little to prepare the student for it. Men like Coach Bragg demonstrate to students qualities necessary to meet the challenges of life away from the protected environment of home.

Many of Coach's students and friends have already listed his qualities and influences. Yet, the school board -- the men who control the system that educates young minds -- is turning a deaf ear to the obvious pleas of the citizens of the county. Your school board should be composed of the advante guarde of the county. These people should exhibit open-mindedness and foresight. They should be objective -- viewing all decisions critically before making them. They should be open to suggestion and to reconsideration of poorly planned action. Surely they can admit mistake -- even the Supreme Court Justices, a body of highly learned men, reverse rulings.

The sentiment for the reinstatement of Coach Bragg as head football coach at Appomattox is loud, I ask that Appomattox County not become stifled; that its leaders not let the youth of the county down. Today's youth need a man like Coach Bragg -- someone to instill a competitive disciplined spirit into often aimless lives. By the way, I have not seen any of Coach boys burning draft cards or administration buildings.

I want Appomattox to continue to be a place I can be proud to say I am from.

Sincerely,
Wilsie S. Paulette

The Pastor Speaks

Tying The Home Together

Some husbands and wives argue about money. The wife may say, "I want a new coat, and you don't provide it for me." The husband may snarl, "I need a new car, and your constant demands prevent my having it." Some husbands and wives argue about in-laws. "We don't ever see my parents," complains the wife. "Your mother just hasn't accepted me," retorts the husband.

Still other husbands and wives don't trust each other. "Where were you so late coming in from work?" inquires the wife. "It's none of your business," sneers the husband, obviously angry.

Still other husbands and wives seem to live in two worlds. Even though they do live under the same roof, they work apart, play apart, socialize with friends of their own sexes, read different things, and scarcely ever talk together.

What's the remedy? There are many needs that are behind all of these situations, but one obvious need could be met if there were more love in the marriage. Paul says in Ephesians 5:25, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." A husband is to love his wife with the same love that Christ has for his own people. Wives are expected similarly to reciprocate with a deep love for their husbands.

What is love? Love is not merely an emotional twinge that's inspired by moonlight and roses. It's not merely some virtue extolled by your favorite crooner. It's not merely a rapidly beating heart overlooking a brightly lighted bay.

Love is a dependence. It is a recognition that you are dependent upon your mate to accomplish all that God intended you to accomplish. It's a recognition that he or she makes up for certain deficiencies in your life and is at work with you to help in overcoming them. Love is dependence.

Love is a willingness to go the second mile to help make the mate what he ought to be. It's a willingness to put up with a bad temper while helping the mate to overcome it. It's a willingness to work with habits of laziness without resorting to verbal guerilla attacks. It is a willingness to give up one night a week bowling with the gang in order to help the wife with a project, a personal need, or the kids. It is a willingness to move the second mile in helping the mate to reach her full potential.

Love is also openness. It never draws the line and says, "I've done my part, now you do yours." It is never content with what it has done. It is always giving of itself. Love doesn't view marriage as a 50/50 proposition. It rather sees it as 100/100 proposition. It is an instance where both partners go all out to assure a success in it.

This is love, and many a marriage that is winding aimlessly through life on a rather listless leg of lonsliness can be replenished, refurbished, and reactivated by a fresh injection of love such as this. This is what you pledged to one another when you took those vows of happiness some years back. Now is the time to bring them openly into fulfilment in your lives together.

THE UNNECESSARY YOKE

Lesson for May 17, 1970

Background Scripture: Acts 15: 1-35; Galatians 2.
Devotional Reading: Romans 10: 4-13.

You are a member of the Parkside Community Christian Church. You were born into a Christian family and have been raised in the heritage of that faith.

At twelve you had your Bar Mitzvah, having completed your church school training. Like other Christians you attend sabbath school and in the evenings you speak Hebrew well enough to read portions of the Old Testament in the ancient tongue.

Furthermore, you keep a kosher house, meaning of course that your wife prepares your meals by the very exacting dietary laws. You do not eat ham or pork and maintain two sets of dishes: one for meat products and the other for dairy items. In addition to Christmas and Easter, your family also celebrates Yom Kippur, Hanukkah, and the Day of Atonement.

The Only Difference

Really the only difference between the life of Parkside Community Christian Church and the nearest synagogue is that the people of Parkside also accept Jesus as the Messiah and Lord, while the Jews of the local synagogue do not. Otherwise, there is little difference between the two groups.

The above description of the religious life of Parkside Church may leave you somewhat confused. Actually, this is what it might be like to be a Christian today if it had not been for an incident in the life of the Christian Church recorded in Acts 15. Had this not taken place, Christianity might be no more than a Jewish sect, rather than a distinct faith as we know it today.

Even Gentiles?

The Christian Church actually began as a group of Jews who had committed themselves to serve Jesus as Lord and Saviour. Even though they acknowledged him as their Messiah, they continued to follow the normal daily lives of respectable Jews.

It was not long, however, until they were driven out of Jerusalem by persecution. Soon they were joined by Samaritans. Later, there were even Gentiles won to "the Way." That must have been a tremendous shock for some Jewish Christians. The Jew was to have nothing to do with Gentiles or Samaritans. Yet, they observed that the Holy Spirit descended upon both Samaritans and Gentiles. Finally, there came word that the church at Antioch had actually sent out missionaries to win the Gentiles to Christ.

Thus, there soon arose a controversy: Did a person have to become a Jew in order to be a Christian? One faction of the church was vigorous in saying that all followers of Christ must also be diligent in the observance of Jewish law. Others, like Paul and Barnabbas, however, saw the grace of Jesus Christ as freeing men from compulsory obedience to the law.

A Question Of Essentials

Finally, a meeting was called to resolve this conflict. Although both groups felt that they were right, they were willing to sit down and negotiate to preserve the unity of the church. In the end, we find a compromise. The end result of the decision meant that it was no longer necessary to live like Jews in order to be Christians. They had responded to Peter's plea: "Now therefore why do you make trial of God by putting a yoke upon the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers or we have been able to bear? But we believe that we shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, just as they will" (Acts 15:10).

What is really essential for a person to be a Christian today? We often do not agree and it is our insistence on these matters that often disrupts the unity of the church. Is it possible that we too place an unnecessary yoke on the necks of those who, but for our insistence upon this or that, would join us in Christian discipleship?

Underground VepcoLines

Plans to spend one percent of its gross annual electricity sales revenue to place selected overhead distribution lines underground were announced today by the Virginia Electric and Power Company.

Testifying in a public hearing before the Virginia State Corporation Commission at Richmond, John M. McGurn, Vepco's vice chairman of the board, labeled the costs of placing existing lines in the company's electrical distribution system underground as a factor in the amount requested by Vepco for its proposed ten per cent rate increase.

McGurn said the program is being planned because "a high premium is now being placed on aesthetics." He said 70% of the new homes now being connected by Vepco are served underground.

Farmers Advised About Life Span ACP Fertilization Practice

Appomattox County farmers were reminded today that they are not eligible to receive Federal cost-sharing for applying fertilizer to fields two years or more in a row under Practice B-1 of the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP). This practice is aimed at improving established vegetative cover for soil or watershed protection.

J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chairman of the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, pointed out that the life span of ACP Practice B-1 is currently 3 years in Virginia. He explained that if Federal ACP funds were used to apply fertilizer to improve the vegetative cover on a field in 1969, they cannot be used for fertilizing the same field until 1973.

Mr. Alvis said an exception to the rule is made when the cover fails through no fault of the farmer and the County ASC Committee determined that a repeat application or a complete reseeding is necessary to meet the conservation problem.

"We can pay for improvements of vegetative cover, but not for normal maintenance," the Chairman concluded.
